Amman Stock Exchange raises Awareness Among Students at Princess Sumaya University for Technology

As part of its corporate social responsibility and commitment to strengthening partnerships with universities and academic institutions, the Amman Stock Exchange (ASE), represented by its CEO, Mazen Wathaifi, participated in an educational lecture organized by the King Abdullah I school of Graduate Studies and Scientific Research at University. The lecture aimed to promote investment knowledge and awareness, introduce students to the national capital market and securities investment mechanisms, and bridge the gap between theoretical knowledge and practical applications.

During the lecture, Wathaifi highlighted the importance of financial markets, particularly the ASE, and its role in the national economy. He also explained the exchange's operational nature, trading mechanisms, and the technical and legislative frameworks governing its activities. In addition, he reviewed the ASE's key developments and achievements, the challenges it faces, and potential approaches to addressing and overcoming them.

At the end, Wathaifi addressed students' questions and inquiries, emphasizing the importance of raising awareness of the capital market and its role in supporting the national economy. He also highlighted the need to foster a culture of informed, knowledge-based investment, helping students better understand financial markets and make well-informed investment decisions.
